NEW YORK STALL GATE UNDER FIRE OF CRITIC

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Interest in the line of Domino, represented at my Heather Farm by King Heather, is keeping up in a remarkable way, especially since the statisticians have unearthed the fact that last year the get of sires of the great American line won about $1,500,000 in purses. There are a large number of great-grandsons and great-great-grandsons of Domino, but very few as close up to the noted stallion as the "King," a grandson.

In a recent interview Algernon Daingerfield, of The Jockey Club, made the point it is an error to consider Domino as a progenitor mainly begetting speed. The Belmont Stakes, won by Omaha the other day at a mile and a half, has been run at various distances since its inauguration in 1867. When won by Commando, Domino's son, and by Peter Pan and Colin, Domino's grandsons, the race was at a mile and three furlongs, quite a distance in itself.

Algernon Daingerfield is a son of the late Major Daingerfield. As is well remembered, Major Daingerfield was in charge of James R. Keene's Castleton Stud in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky when many famous horses were bred. Elizabeth Daingerfield and Margaret Daingerfield are also well known to racegoers.

In a "story" in the Thoroughbred Record, Margaret Daingerfield, in the same fearless manner that characterized Major Daingerfield, wants to know if it is not possible to devise a better method of starting. Oldtimers recall that it was the doughty major who put the puzzling question:

"Why is it that the thoroughbred horse, the noblest animal in God's creation, is so often surrounded by blackguards?"

In regard to the elimination of Cavalcade from the Suburban right after the start when Jockey Gilbert was thrown over the colt's head, Miss Daingerfield says:

"It is remarkable that with an accident such as this occurring, to say nothing of frequent bumpings at the start that have eliminated many a potential winner from the contest, that there has not been a loudly voiced criticism of the stall starting gate used on New York tracks.

"The rules of racing set forth that each horse shall be allowed five feet of the course. The stallgate limits this to three feet. Now this amount might be sufficient if horses were run on trolleys like mechanical rabbits, but with any field of four footed animals it is impossible to think that they will all ever start perfectly straight. So the horse jumps a little to the right or the left as the bell rings for the start and bumps the one next to him, usually eliminating both from the race as far as winning is concerned. There must be something better than this contrivance that is entirely unnatural and very dangerous to the thoroughbred horse."

There's plenty of food for thought for race track impresarios.

SHERIFF NAMED COUNTY OFFICER FOR VACATION

Contestants For Engineer's Job Overlooked Because Of Possibilty Of Legal Entanglements

At the meeting on Monday of the County Board of Supervisors, Sheriff James J. McGrath was designated acting county executive for the vacation period of Executive Walter T. Kellogg for the next three weeks.

The move, coming as a complete surprise at the outset of the session, set a precedent in California. It is believed that it is the first time that a peace officer has been placed in the county's highest executive position, with full charge over half a dozen important administrative branches.

Considerable flurry arose owing to the claim that the county charter provided that the county engineer shall assume the duties of the county executive.

Supervisor Beer objected to passage of the resolution naming the sheriff. He wanted Carl Scott to act for Kellogg during the latter's absence.

Assistant District Attorney Dan E. Sullivan told the board that the district attorney himself had approved the resolution designating the sheriff.

Supervisor Al Witt Jr. of Daly City, drew gasps of surprise from the audience by the statement:

"I don't see any need for further argument on this thing. The district attorney says it is legal. We have had enough trouble down here trying

HOME BASEBALL TEAM TO PLAY AT JEFFERSON HIGH

Will Meet Burlingame Blues Sunday In Peninsula League Contest

The baseball fans of Daly City will have the opportunity to witness another scheduled game of the Peninsula League championship the coming Sunday afternoon at the Jefferson High School diamond at 2 o'clock.

The opposing clubs will be the strong Burlingame Blues and the Daly City Tanforan nine and an exciting game is expected.

Our home team won the first half of the contest by winning a total of five games, while the closest competitor was second with four.

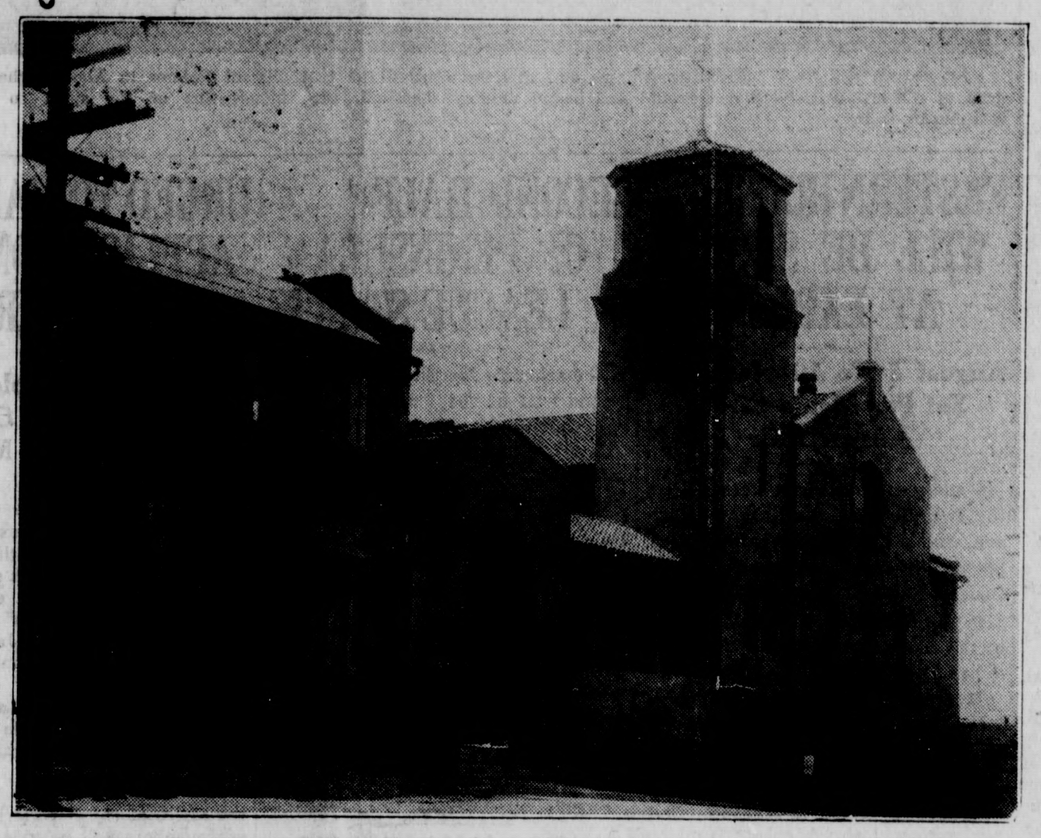
There should be a large crowd of rooters on hand to boost the home team and encourage the boys to greater efforts in giving the fans a high quality of baseball in Daly City.

BIDS FOR HIGHWAY EXTENSION OPENED

The State Highway Commission has announced that bids will be opened on July 8 for the construction of the first link in the new coast highway from Thornton Station to Edgemar.

When this stretch in completed residents of the coastside will have a direct connection to Junipero Serra boulevard with a linking at Alemany boulevard. This will save them considerable mileage in traveling from their homes to San Francisco bay sections.

OUR LADY OF PERPETUAL HELP CHURCH CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING



Ten Year Period Witnesses Wonderful Progress Made By Organization In Daly City

The Catholic Church in Daly City commemorates its tenth anniversary next Sunday. This beautiful place of worship was made possible by the sacrifice and loyalty of men and women of this parish, who gave of their time and their means to erect this beautiful House of God on the hill.

From organization to dedication of a $100,000 church in half a decade, was the progress shown by the parish of Our Lady of Perpetual Help. To the Reverend James Donohoe was given the task of looking to the spiritual wants of the newly formed parish of Daly City, and under his leadership the new church was built and a complete church organization began to function from the very beginning.

The church contains a beautiful shrine of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, which has drawn thousands of worshippers from all parts of the bay district. The shrine contains a copy of a miraculous picture of the Mother of God, which is famed the world over for its beauty as well as for its almost miraculous powers. Thousands who have invoked the interecession of the Mother of God, while kneeling before this image, have been granted extraordinary favors and graces. Next Sunday is the special feast day of Our Lady of Perpetual Help and, as a fitting preparation for this feast, a Novena of prayers is being conducted each day, with masses each morning at 6, 7:30 and 9 o'clock. Special services each afternoon at 3:30 and again in the evening at 8 o'clock. The services this year are again being conducted by the Reverend Francis X. Darmady, a Redemptorist missionary, who is well known to the people of Daly City and environs. Father Darmady has conducted the devotions for the past two years and his efforts have been blessed with much success.

The first Novena to be given in this church was conducted by that noted and eminent orator, the Reverend Henry D. Sutton of the Redemptorist Order, and every year since the beginning of the devotions a Redemptorist missionary has led the devotions before the feast day of Our Lady of Perpetual Help.

Through the successful and energetic efforts of Father James Donohoe, the spiritual and temporal welfare of this parish have increased manifold. He brought the Sisters of St. Joseph to open a school and from its opening day it has been attended by many of the Catholic children of Daly City.

Next Sunday will be a very important day in the history of the parish. First it will commemorate the tenth anniversary of the founding of the parish. It will celebrate the feasts of Our Lady of Perpetual Help and Corpus Christi and will also bring to a close the devotions of the Novena. An outdoor procession in honor of the Eucharistic Lord will be one of the features of the day. This will take place at 3:30 and will draw many hundreds from the bay district. Thousands of blessed flowers and medals will be distributed as souvenirs of this great celebration. Father Darmady will speak at the closing services at 3:30 and again at 8 p. m., for the second closing, when he will impart the Apostolic blessing in the name of Pope Pius XI.

The beautiful soft pealing chimes again will ring out their joyous invitation to come to honor the Mother of God, and will cause responsive echoes in the hearts of a good and loyal people who have erected the beautiful church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in Daly City.

HIT RUN CHARGES AGAINST DALY CITY MAN DISMISSED

Charges of manslaughter were dismissed on Monday, of this week, in the San Francisco Municipal Court, against Olive Saiz, 38, of 70 Mission Circle, Daly City, teacher at Jefferson Union High School, who accidently ran down and killed Mrs. Etta Bloom, 70 years old, of 1356 Geneva avenue in San Francisco on May 31.

Testimony of inspectors showed that Saiz was driving within the speed limit and that the accident apparently was unavoidable.

Miss Hilda Bloom, daughter of the victim, appeared before Municipal Judge Daniel S. O'Brien and said the family did not wish to prosecute, as they believed Saiz was not to blame.

COUNTY TO PAY ITS PLEDGE FOR AIRBASE FUND

At Same Time San Francisco Reminded of Dereliction In Keeping Promises

At the meeting of the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors on Monday it was agreed to keep this county's part of the bargain to pay $50,000 toward the purchase of the Sunnyvale airbase site, but not before San Francisco was reminded rather pointedly about the promises if had made to this county, and broken.

Motion to pay the $50,000 for the airbase site at the rate of $10,000 a year was made by Supervisor Walter M. High, Burlingame, and seconded by Supervisor Al Witt, Daly City. Neither one of whom was a member of the board when the original agreement was entered into.

Then Supervisors Witt and Francis proceeded to tell representatives present from San Francisco about a few promises made by that city to this county which have since been sidestepped by the former.

Francis opened with the reminder to San Francisco of its promise made in connection with the revocation of the Candlestick bridge permit by the San Mateo board. Francis said San Francisco officials appeared before the San Mateo county board enmasse, and said any favor would be granted if the county only would revoke the Candlestick bridge permit.. San Mateo county revoked the permit, and then asked San Francisco to construct the three miles of Ocean Shore highway around Pedro mountain, which, Francis said, the city officials promised faithfully to do. The work never even has been started, asserted the supervisors.

At this point Supervisor Al Witt put in a few pointed remarks about the dumping of San Francisco garbage in this county. He charged San Francisco deliberately is ignoring San Mateo county's wishes and laws by continuing to dump its garbage in this county. Witt urged the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce officials present to use their best efforts to have this violation stopped.

A number of protests wkere lodged with the board against payment.

FAR-SEEING PREDICT GOOD DAYS TO COME

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

My friend, Earle W. Knight, of the ever welcome publication, The Alaska Weekly, has a way of saying the right thing at the right time. Not always but in many instances, the northern editor thinks along the same line I think. As time goes on, I am confident more and more of the citizens of this country will see that the following paragraph is altogether wise:

"The people will never willingly go back to the point from which President Roosevelt started on his New Deal program. Each man for himself and the devil take the hindmost is no longer a social theory appealing to the masses. The devils at the heels of the hindmost are altogether too ruthless and there are far and away too many hindmost; in fact, none of my acquaintances seem very far out in front—not more than a jump and a half ahead of the nearest devil.

"There probably is a way to achieve the purpose of NRA minus the features proven impractical and within constitutional limitations. If there is not, the people will doubtless help the President change the constitution. In the meantime it would be a fine idea for each good American to sit tight in the middle of the boat."

That the backward group harboring the hope that the "good old days of dog eat dog" will return have no comprehensive plan to offer in place of the New Deal is shown by their well nigh incoherent patter printed day after day in various journals. In a San Francisco paper under the byline of Lewis Haney on the financial page I note such ill-digested outpourings along the line as we do not want "reforms" that kill prosperity, and if any dictating is to be done we want it done according to the constitution. Another outburst:

"We are tired of promises and of experiments for experiments' sake. We are disgusted with confusion and waste. We are sick of uncertainty."

The clearness of the thinking of an Earle Knight is an indication the way things are going. No one will follow the lead of muddle-headed writers. If they do not know themselves what they want, how will others?

G. S. Eldridge, an analytical chemist, has come forward with a plan to solve the problem of the adverse trade balance of British Columbia with Canadian provinces of the eastern part of the great nation to the north of us. He suggests the issuance of currency on a 4 to 1 ratio against the newly mined gold produced in British Columbia and with all unemployed men returning to work within two months from initiation of public works schemes resultant from the available money.

Eldridge emphasizes that Eastern Canada has extracted nearly two billion dollars from British Columbia in trade balances in the past 50 years. He states his suggestion may appear radical at first, but that it is really quite orthodox and is in fact being used by the soundest countries in the world.

According to Eldridge, who is active in the British Columbia Chamber of Mines, the province cannot continue to enjoy favorable trade balances with Great Britain, Australia and Japan unless purchases from those countries are increased.

The expert considers British Columbia will be helpless to carry on foreign trade unless what he terms the present one-sided arrangement with Eastern Canada is changed by coinage of gold by British Columbia as an emergency measure.

It is estimated that Eastern Canada sells $75,000,000 more goods to British Columbia each year than it buys.

COMPETITION BY CRACK COWBOYS SALINAS RODEO

Lovely Women Riders Will Also Be There Looking For Show Honors

Crack cowboys of the nation will soon be heading toward Salinas to enter for competition for four world championships and the fattest purses in the history of the annual California Rodeo.

In each instance the saddle bags of these hard riding, leather lunged vaqueros contained at least two items, lariats and linament—lariats with which to cope with the wildest bulls and meanest "hoss flesh" ever assembled at Salinas, and linament for their own punishment taking hides. Range and skill and daring will feature each minute of the approaching twenty-fourth annual rodeo, July 18 to 21, and the "cow waddies" are in top form for the ordeal.

From various parts of the West rodeo officials have been gathering the "orneriest" steers and mustangs they could find, and they are not just sure that one of these impatient critters will not emerge as the real champ of the coming frontier classic.

Anticipating record crowds, heads of the show have increased the seating capacity at the arena, where the purple and brown Gabilans form a picturesque backdrop for this outstanding frontier event of the West, and the arena itself has been vastly improved.

But there will be more to see than the match of brawn and cunning between man and beast. Young womanhood—the loveliest in the state—will be on hand to vie for the honor of being adjudged the finest outdoor high school girl in California. The winner and her mother will be awarded a free round trip to the Hawaiian Islands.

A night of mardi gras and revelry will be held on July 20—when no one ever sleeps all night, and when "yippee" turns "whoop-ee-ee" for a little while.

Tires blow out more readily in warm weather, and replacing worn tires at this time of the year is a wise precaution.

"BECKY SHARP" IS TO SHOW AT ORPHEUM

On January 23, 1927, there was exhibited for the first time a picture called "The Jazz Singer." Al Jolson was its star.

The film was unique among motion pictures in that for the first time in a feature-length film, a star actually talked and sang.

On June 26, 1935—more than eight years later— there will open at the RKC-Golden Gate Theater, a picture called "Becky Sharp." Miriam Hopkins is its star and it was directed by Rouben Memoulian.

Like "The Jazz Singer," this new film is unique among motion pictures in that it is the first feature-length photo-play to be produced entirely in full color.

"Becky Sharp" can truly be called a moving picture—a moving painting—for one sees a series of magnificent animated compositions, all blending and harmonious, appear in like-like colors upon the theater canvas. Throughout, there is no indication of the harshness or blurriness that have marked color pictures of the past.

In addition to Miss Hopkins in the title role, the cast includes Frances Dee, Billie Burke, Alison Skipworth, Alen Mowbray, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nigel Bruce, William Faversham, G. P. Huntley, Jr. and others. The picture was produced by Kenneth MacGowan.

COASTSIDE CIVIC UNION IN MEETING

The Coastside Civic Union held its regular meeting Tuesday evening of this week, at the Skull Cacker Inn at Salada Beach.

Among the county officials present were Supervisors Witt, Francis and High.

Many problems concerning the coastside of the county were discussed at length.

At his suggestion a committee was appointed to meet with the County Board of Supervisors and endeavor to have that body to seek aid from the government under the SERA project contemplating the leveling off of Pedro Rock on the coastside, so as to make the contiguous territory a safer place for fishermen to enjoy the sport of angling.

CARE WITH JACK

Many modern cars built low with the axles difficult to see require great care when using a jack.

If the wheels do not immediately rise from the ground it is possible the jack is against a tie instead of the axle. Bending the tie rod will throw the wheels out of line.

HOURS OF DARKNESS INCREASE ACCIDENTS

Reports state that accident records for 1934 show that there was not a single one of the twelve hours of normal darkness in which the rate of death per accident was less than during daytime hours. Yet many drive just as fast during darkness as in the daytime.

From 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., the normal daylight hours, there were 459,510 automobile accidents last year in which 15,050 persons were killed. From 6 p. m. to 6 a. m., the normal hours of darkness, when the volume of traffic generally is only one-fifth as great as in daytime, there were 422,490 accidents in which 20,950 persons were killed. The rate of death per accident was 51.4 per cent worse during the hours of darkness than during the hours of daylight, while on the basis of traffic volume, it was several hundred per cent greater.

Last year 2810 persons were killed in 79,380 accidents in the four rush hours from 6 to 10 in the mornings, while 10,940 were killed in 252,250 accidents in the four rush hours from 5 to 9 in the evenings. The deaths in the four evening hours exceeded the record of the four morning hours by 289 per cent, while the rate of death per accident during the four evening hours was 22.5 per cent worse than for the four morning hours. From 1 to 6 a. m., when traffic is the lightest, the rate of death per accident was nearly 32 per cent worse than the average for all accidents combined.

Drivers should be afraid of the dark. Pedestrians should take more than the usual precautions when crossing streets or walking along highways during the hours of dusk and darkness.

SET GENERATOR BACK

If the generator charging rate was advanced to meet the severe conditions of cold weather, have the brush adjusted to conform to the lesser requirements of the current season.

The danger of failing to do so is not so much that the battery will be overcharged, but that the constant heavy load will cause the generator itself to deteriorate. The lighter its work as a general rule, the longer its life will be.

Draining Crankcase

The proper time to drain the crankcase is after the motor has been run long enough to warm the oil so that it will run out freely.

This plan will assist in removing particles of carbon, sediment, or other substance.

RETARDED SPARK

If the spark is retarded too much, late firing occurs and the heat caused by the compressed mixture of gas reaches a greater area of cylinder wall, causing overheating.

MEANING OF DAY OF INDEPENDENCE

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Fireworks, picnics, candy, ice cream and lemonade — every conceivable thing that can thrill the heart of a girl of boy is expected on the Fourth of July. Dad and Mother, Grandpa and Grandma, brother John and sister Sue, all live their anticipations, for they are children, too, only grown a bit older. All down through the years of history, the loyal descendants of Uncle Sam look forward with happiness each summer to our greatest of all patriotic holidays. Why should the signing of a document cause all this bustle and commotion? These words from the Great Declaration itself are the answer: "We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston were the members of a committee chosen to draw up a declaration. Thomas Jefferson proceeded to compose the document, which was somewhat modified later by Franklin and Adams. On the Fourth of July, Jefferson's declaration was adopted and later was signed by twenty-five members of the Continental Congress, but not without bitter wrangling because several members of this Congress opposed it. Each colony had one vote, the majority of the delegates casting it, while those of the minority opinion counted for nothing. Delaware had three delegates, but one of them, Caesar R. Rodney, was absent in Delaware, and of the two present one was on each side. A messenger was sent hastily for Rodney. On hearing the news of the deadlock, Rodney mounted his horse and started at full gallop for Philadelphia, 80 miles away. All day and all night he sped through forests and over streams. This was a greater ride than the more famous one of Paul Revere; the more remarkable, it seems, when we remember that the rider was suffering from a cancer in the face, which afterward was the cause of his death. The delegate reached the capital city just in time to cast his vote and save Delaware for freedom.

The rest of the story is well known. The ringing of the old Liberty Bell for freedom. Night was turned into day with bonfires and illuminations. The Declaration was read in cities, towns and villages—from the pulpits in the churches, from the public platform, at the head of each brigade of the army—and the roll of the drum and roar of cannon furnished the glad answer.

Since that time we have grown into a great nation. Could the men and women who suffered privation and death during the long War of Independence see our country as it is today, the great good it is accomplishing and the future work yet to be done, they would assuredly say, "Valley Forge was not lived in vain."

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." These words from Revelation comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, June 23, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought: But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory:" (I Corinthians 2: 6, 7).

The following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Eternal things (verities) are God's thoughts as they exist in the spiritual realm of the real. Temporal things are the thoughts of mortals and are the unreal, being the opposite of the real or the spiritual and eternal" p. 337).

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which city he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis.

"'Sfunny," he said, "how that Larsen thought I was with the chippy, wasn't it?"

"How do you know she's a chippy?" said Hal in spontaneous irritation.

"She looks it, doesn't she?" said Crack, his lazy amiability undismayed.

"No," said Hal, promptly hoping to confirm that she didn't.

There was another pause—apparently serene for Crack but oddly irksome for Hal. A truck passing in the street shot out a violent backfire opposite them; Hal started all through his body, and glanced at the man again. Crack was in complete, indolent repose still, his quiet look barely stirred by a hint of sly mischief—as if he had caused that sudden explosion to confirm some lazy guess about Hal.

He stepped confidentially to Hal's side of the door and said in a low tone: "See that big bird standin' at the back there? He's a dick. A detective."

Hal raised his eyebrows perfunctorily before he said, "How d'you know that?"

"I thought he was," Crack said, "and then I saw his badge."

"H'm," said Hal.

Crack smiled and, except for a vague, drowsy speculation in his eyes, his smile was youthful, halfway candid, not unengaging. "He's not looking for you, is he?" he said, cocking his head a very little.

"If he were, he shouldn't have much trouble finding me; and I'd be an ass to tell you anyway, wouldn't I?"

Crack's smile sobered just a shadow. After a while he said, "Think she's going to Hollywood?" It happened to be precisely what Hal was moodily wondering, and he was startled into a shrewder look at Crack.

"Wouldn't be surprised," he said, and wished he hadn't been trapped even into that much interest.

"She's got a good figure," said Crack speculatively. "I like sorta broad shoulders and nice clean-cut ankles on a babe, don't you?"

"Hadn't thought," Hal murmured straight ahead of him, angry and a little ashamed that this shy-mannered stranger should mention the very things he looked for first in any girl.

Hal snapped his cigarette into the gutter and went inside to sit on his suitcase again. The girl hadn't altered her position of solemn, en-garde waiting. But the terrier stretched luxuriously—leaning 'way forward with his hind legs straight out and his chin stretched up. The stretch broke into a friendly grin and a wagging of the docked tail when he met Hal's eyes. Hal smiled, winked, and held out his hand. The dog came stepping forward to the end of his lead and put a cold nose against Hal's fingers. The girl's head turned quickly; Hal saw that her solemn eyes were large and of a deep, yellowed-flecked blue—also that they were alive with the beginnings of defensive hostility; at once she pulled the dog back and looked away.

You can go to the devil, Hal said to himself—you and your broad shoulders and your slim ankles; I hope Martin Crack makes you and makes you like it.

A little after eleven, some luggage—two veteran suitcases, a cardboard hatbox already losing the rim of its lid and a dress-box tied up with two kinds of string—arrived from the Grand Central. It was the work of but fifteen minutes more for Larsen to find Jake Miller in the garage behind the office and start him loading. Miller's car was a large Packard sedan of another decade with paint stained and lusterless as the garage floor, a diagonal of adhesive tape across the dull windshield, and all the nickel-work the color of old and unloved pewter.

Miller's futile hand unfolded an immense trunk rack on the back, took out a tarpaulin and began spreading it with care over two oil puddles on the garage floor. On this he stacked the luggage with what seemed accidental neatness and lashed the tarpaulin around it with clothesline.

Added to everything else, thought Hal, he'll go sound asleep at the wheel and run us into somebody's house.

"How many passengers have you got?" Hal asked when the luggage was up.

"Seven," said Miller.

"Six besides yourself, 'ey?" said Hal, thinking, Oh good G--d!

"Seven," Miller repeated. "Got a intention. Got a seat stands on a box between the jump-seats." He chuckled as if he had outwitted some one. "I'll show it to you."

"I guess I'll see it soon enough," said Hal. "What are we waiting for now?"

"Nothin'," said Miller, grinning.

"Well, where's everybody else?"

"In the office, reckon."

"How about loading 'em in and starting?"

Miller chuckled again. "Guess we might's well."

Hal leaned against a pillar of the garage—hands in side pockets, quick, sure eyes brooding, mouth moodily set between the lean lines of his cheeks—and watched them file in, his "companions" for an eight-day July ride through country which he vaguely conceived as the flat, dusty setting for midwestern novels.

First came Mr. and Mrs. Pulsipher—she almost scuttling, like a brood hen who knows that in another moment panic will be at her heels, and he following close with lanky bewilderment and the short steps of someone being pushed from behind. They hurried into the back seat.

Then came the nun, who had sat cool and unmoving all this time in a corner of the office, her tranquil face patient, faintly sad, and immaculate as its tight white framing. And then came Miller, stuffing soiled money into his soiled wallet; and then Martin Crack, looking like an ambitionless, easily pleased countryman except for the special tidiness of his thinning hair and the lazy speculation under his blue eyes. After him came the girl, and Hal realized that, without knowing it, he had been waiting to see her walk. It had the grace that comes from unconsciousness of effect, the charm that is near awkwardness, like the walk of a long-legged boy, suggestive of inquiry, of expectance.

You can still go to the devil, Hal thought, but if you walk to him that way, I shall watch you with admiration.

But he wished Crack hadn't said that about broad shoulders and slim ankles.

"The ladies usually starts off in back," Miller said and waited for Pulsipher to lunge forward abruptly and abandon his injured wife.

The nun got in and the girl. The dog wasn't so keen about the idea, and he growled ominously as Crack stooped to help him. And then Hal saw that another man had come—a bulky, ruddy, tough-cheeked man of perhaps fifty, in a pepper-and-salt suit, no waistcoat, gay bow tie, and panama hat.

There Was Something Funny About the Unreality of the Thing.

Miller surveyed him with a half-smile in his sleepiness and said, "You're biggest: you better get in front." And he added a drowsy "Hey" for Hal.

Crack got into the farther jump-seat, Pulsipher took the invention next him, and Hal cramped himself in last. There was a slamming of doors, and the oppression of the eight days ahead, crowded among these dull and mutually distrustful strangers, was shut into the close, dusty-mohair atmosphere. Miller leaned over the wheel as if he were already going very fast, and dragged back the lever noisily. The engine gave a first tug against its load, moved it, gathered sudden momentum, and plunged with venerable eagerness down the ramp into the hazy heat of Forty-eighth street.

Score for the first speech of the trip went to Mrs. Pulsipher; time: ten minutes. Passing the long, stone-faced docks with sunlit masts and flags and funnels visible over them, she suddenly announced, "That's where the boat goes to Europe."

The burly man in the front seat turned slowly and suspiciously round, a fresh but unheeded cigarette puffing and joggling at the side of his lips as he said, "Which boat, ma'am?"

"All the boats—to Europe," said Mrs. Pulsipher, her manner implying she hadn't been speaking to him.

The man edged himself sidewise, with his arm along the back of the seat, and looked at her with a scholar's potential respect.

"You've been to Europe," he stated.

"No," said Mrs. Pulsipher severely. "But we've been in New York two weeks and my son-in-law from Bridgeport showed us all over and showed us where the boat goes to Europe. This is where it goes from."

"I believe you, mam," said the man, his deep voice quiet and respectful. "It's very interesting. My name is Kerrigan—Giles Kerrigan. I am looking forward to this journey, but I judge we're mostly strangers. Let us have introductions." His unsmiling look continued past Hal in the direction of Mrs. Pulsipher.

"Mrs. Ella Pulsipher," she said, less severely: "and that's John Pulsipher, my husband."

"You're from Iowa, mam," said Kerrigan.

"Yes," said Mrs. Pulsipher, interested beyond distrust now. "Burbank. How did you guess?"

"Los Angeles is the capital of Iowa, mam," said Kerrigan solemnly, "and I was told this crate—this car was going there." Hal thought, the man's probably a nut. Kerrigan went on: "I vote for you for chaperon of this emigration, Mrs. P. Will you get us the names of the other ladies?"

There was a moment of silence and then a very soft, careful, faintly foreign voice behind Hal said, "I am Sister Anastasia." It was surprisingly beautiful to hear her say "Ahna-stahzia." Hal looked up at the duplicate rear-vision-mirror to see if the Trafford girl's expression was as soft and gentle as that name, but he could see only her clear, possessed profile and the brief flow of golden hair under the protective rim of her blue hat.

Go ahead, look like that: somebody's going to speak to you now.

But her barely pursed lips parted in a slight smile when Mrs. Pulsipher said, "And your name, young lady?" "Trafford," said the girl, in a tone nearer huskiness than you expected: "Barry Trafford." "Barry?" said Mrs. Pulsipher. "That sounds like a man's name." "I know," said the girl quietly; "my father liked it."

"And did well to," said Kerrigan in grave courtliness, "if you'll allow me."

Hal saw her head turn, saw her blue eyes large and solemn but not hostile as she said, "Thank you." Even without looking in the mirror, he was conscious of her—both in it and behind him. Relax, you, d—n it, relax: I won't speak to you.

Martin Crack announced himself then, with a lazy sort of modesty neither amiable nor otherwise, and Kerrigan looked at Hal.

"Henry Ireland," said Hal, trying to match the humorlessness of the brown, sedate eyes, even as he wondered if he really saw deep in them a flicker of something youthful and eager.

Mrs. Pulsipher tumbled quick words at him from behind: "Any relation to that Frederick Ireland, that banker, that Ireland who's president of that big bank here?" Hal turned his head as far as he could without moving his body. "Oh, yes," he said. "Eldest and favorite son."

Gaunt John Pulsipher, racked by some surprising and hampered eagerness, began to stammer, quick, unconvincing laughter in his throat, until he snapped his lean fingers; then he said, "He-he-he-he ain't got but the one son."

"That would still leave me eldest," said Hal drily.

Pulsipher's earnestness slowly faded; he blushed, tried to smile, dropped his eyes, and murmured, "I thought you was foolin'."

Hal glanced into the mirror and a slight, wry satisfaction stirred his lips; the Trafford girl's eyes—not meeting his—were angry as when she had pulled her dog back from him, angrier, perhaps, for the knowledge that he was looking at her reflection and smiling to himself. He hoped so.

"And our pilot," Kerrigan said, gesturing briefly with a strong, not ungraceful hand: "Mr. Jake (Ace) Miller." Miller grinned.

"I always think," said Mrs. Pulsipher, with resumed severity, "that when strangers come together, it's nice to try to make everything pleasant as they can for each other. It's not hard to be nice."

"It must be hard for some people," said Barry Trafford's low voice.

"Maybe it is," Mrs. Pulsifer agreed, grimly pleased. "It's too bad if it's that way, too. They miss so much for themselves."

"They think it's the others who're missing it, so I s'pose that makes it even," said Barry.

Hal chuckled inside: That's the girl; but I'll make you madder than that, too. And before we get to Los Angeles, possibly you'll be sorry for it.

He looked at Kerrigan. The brown eyes were thinly sedate over wise sparks of laughter; and then one eyelid flicked down and up, quick as a camera shutter.

There was something funny about the unreality of the thing. Hal had to believe New Jersey and the hot sun and the unyielding lumpiness of the seat; but he couldn't believe anything beyond that, couldn't visualize the journey's ever getting farther than New Jersey. He couldn't believe that these seven other people, close and real and hot around him now, would stay real; nor that his mood, mixed of defiance, impatience, and anger with himself for getting into such a joyless state, would stay real; nor that his vivid sense of the girl's well-formed, hostile presence behind him would. Yet the journey and its days undoubtedly lay ahead; and it couldn't stay as it was now. A continuance of that was patently too fantastic to credit, for eight days, for eight hours even. The son of Frederick Ireland coasting on his father's name! Good old Frederick Ireland.

At least he had pretty well settled that they'd leave him alone now. Pulsipher had retired into humble perplexity, and there was no one on the running board to talk to Hal through the window. The restraint he seemed to have imposed upon the sociability of the load might wear off; or he'd get used to it.

MUST INCREASE THE PURCHASING POWER OF SILVER

Canada Is Among Greatest Beneficaries Of Silver Restoration

The following article is by A. N. Wolverton and printed in a recent issue of the Vancouver Sun:

During all the controversy of the past four years for and against the incluusion of silver with gold for monetary purposes, far from sufficient emphasis appears to have been credited to the astonishing record of silver as a standard of purchasing power.

Intensive study of charts prepared by the United States bureau of statistics, than whom there would appear to be no better authority, leads to some rather extraordinary conclusions.

For practically a century up to, say 1931, when governmental interference with the age old law of supply and demand, more or less temporarily modified natural reactions, the purchasing power of an ounce of pure silver varied less than 15 per cent as measured by average wholesale price levels of 550 commodities.

With minor exceptions, the disclosed variation between average daily and monthly silver prices and concurrent commodity price levels—over long periods of history—varied less than 4 per cent.

Governmental charts indicate that this strange constant relationship was maintained, even during the period from 1913 to 1931, during which the market for silver fluctuated from extremes of 25 cents to $1.37 as measured in gold.

During the same double decade and prior to abandonment of the gold standard by the majority of important nations, the record of gold as a standard of purchasing power really left much to be desired.

For instance, at one time during the period under review, an ounce of pure gold would only buy seven bushels of wheat, while at another time that ounce of pure gold would buy 45 bushels.

Surely it has been demonstrated that something was lacking—something unsatisfactory—in the use of that single standard, so-called "sound money."

It is axiomatic that the greatest good to the greatest number—individually, nationally and internationally—demands a speeding up of trade, commerce and industry.

Broad markets must be developed to absorb surplus production of our nation—and nothing can do more to accomplish this end than the adoption internationally of a standard measure of purchasing power freely acceptable by all peoples, and which may be expected to remain reasonably constant, than temporarily satisfactory except one involving both gold and silver.

No standard has ever proven more satisfactory except one involving both gold and silver.

There appears to be no question but that abandonment of silver as a monetary standard by several important western nations during the past half century, and a partial corner in gold by the same nations, has had much to do with unsettlement and depression during periods of maximum production but insufficient distribution.

Great Mistake

The world is gradually achieving recognition of the fact that a great mistake was made by the jettisoning of silver, and by virtue of the leadership of the greatest creditor nation in the world there is but little doubt that former satisfactory standards involving both gold and silver will be internationally adopted in the early future.

The London Pact of 1933; United States Legation of December 22, 1933, authorizing purchase of 24 million ounces American production at 64½ cents an ounce, annually.

The American Silver Purchase Act of June 19, 1934, authorizing purchase at home or abroad of sufficient silver to form a 25 per cent backing of American currency.

The Nationalization Act of August 9, commandeering all American held silver at a price of 50.01 cents per ounce, are all stepping stones to the ultimate goal of international monetary stabilization, which is bound to exert a profound effect on national and international affairs.

Maximum success will involve the adoption internationally of a dual standard—a fixed ratio of gold and silver—on a basis so sound in itself that it may be expected to remain stable through a long period of time.

Three or four years ago, after a very thorough study and analysis of national and international statistics, the writer developed a theory which received much complimentary comment from important sources, as well as considerable criticism.

At various times arguments have been advanced by many authorities involving proposed stabilization bases of 16 to 1, 20 to 1, 25 to 1.

The writer has maintained on many occasions that each one of these proposals, including the recent widely publicized suggestion of immediate arbitrary valuation of silver at $1.29 per ounce, all lack something of that ultimate inherent natural stability which maximum success demands.

A careful and thorough study of the subject and all the factors involved lends added weight to the soundness of an international policy of stabilization on a basis of 40 to 1.

Such a basis means 87½ cent silver in relation to $35 gold.

An important factor against recent suggested arbitrary valuation at $1.29 for silver — the statutory coinage standard set by the Coinage Acts of both United States and Canada—is that such a standard would eliminate governmental seignorage profit, a very important source of revenue for all governments.

On the other hand, stabilization at 87½ cents leaves a governmental seignorage of approximately 32 per cent, which is plenty, but not too much.

Canada Lags

The Dominion of Canada, third nation in world production of silver, has undoubtedly lagged in the adoption of a silver policy similar to that already so profitably adopted by its great neighbor, the United States.

A resolution prepared by the writer, and endorsed by most public bodies in British Columbia, was presented to Ottawa eighteen months ago, but no legislative attention resulted.

The only modification of American policy involved the suggestion that the Dominion arbitrarily subsidize each province to an amount equivalent to one-half the seignorage profit on each province's respective production.

The adoption of such a policy—involving silver purchases at 64½ cents per ounce—and on the basis of British Columbia's annual average production, 1925 to 1930, would have meant an additional subsidy to British Columbia of approximately $3,100,000, at no cost to the Dominion.

There is no objection to coinage of a few hundred thousand silver dollars.

However, the advantage involved in such a policy appears to be unimportant.

Modern nations have been educated to carry currency in paper form—always provided confidence in that paper is maintained by generous metallic backing.

The ultimate end would be far better accomplished by storage of bullion at Ottawa and the issue of silver certificates against that stored bullion.

The handwriting is on the wall.

International stabilization of silver on a fixed ratio with gold is coming.

Such a policy will benefit Canada to far greater degree than many other nations—and British Columbia to a greater degree than any other province in Canada.

The fact should be emphasized that the production of a unit of wealth from an average silver-lead mine involves the gainful employment of several times as many men as the production of a similar unit of wealth from a gold mine.

Work and wages is not only a political slogan, but a national problem.

Support Producers

British Columbia and Vancouver should get behind the development of sound silver producers in British Columbia—and, incidentally, accumulate a larger share of profits which will undoubtedly accrue to foreign investors who are already recognizing the potentialities of silver properties in British Columbia.

The largest producer of silver in the United States—Sunshine—has advanced 2400 per cent, due largely to American silver policy.

The two most important producers of silver in British Columbia—Consolidated Smelters and Premier—have shown similar action.

The former has advanced from $26 to $160 and the latter from 36 cents to $2.

Both actions were largely due to advanced world markets for silver—ably and very profitably led by the United States, but without assistance or co-operation in the least degree by the third largest producer in the world—out own Dominion of Canada.

EVILS OF PARKING AT INTERSECTION

Rated worst among those charged with enforcement of the regulations regarding parking is that of parking too close to a fire hydrant. Because of the sureness of its being punished, however, this violation is relatively uncommon. It is said a much more common violation, and one whose total adverse effect upon the public safety is perhaps as great, is that of parking too close to an intersection.

Many a motorist who has parked unthinkingly near an intersection and in such a fashion as to reduce visibility to the zero point is primarily responsible for accidents that have resulted in personal injury, or worse, and for mishaps involving heavy property loss.

There are those who think this offense merits an especially severe punishment, one much more heavy than that meted out for an ordinary parking violation. Logis is on their side.

Every tabulation of accidents ever made shows the street intersection to be a primary danger point. There it is that the pedestrian most often meets his Waterloo, an injury that may prove fatal or result in his painful disablement, possibly for life. It is at the street intersection, too, that collisions of car with car are most common. These accidents are not always marked by physical injury, but they almost invariably result in property damage.

All classes of intersection mishaps are the result in some degree of low visibility. Their prevention is a matter of every driver being able to see the pedestrian or the car coming from the opposite direction.

It is failure to realize this that permits a motorist to so park his car at an intersection as to further reduce a visibility that is none too high under the best of circumstances.

TIME FOR CHECKING

Every time a car is greased the steering mechanism and other parts such as tie rods, steering arms, and drag link should be checked for looseness and wear.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: Where is Patagonia?

Answer: Located by a geographic term formerly applied to that portion of South America lying south of the thirty-eighth parallel. The region was discovered and named by Magellan in 1520 and was left unclaimed until 1881, when by treaty it was divided between Chile and Argentina. The name has now no political significance.. Although Patagonia is no longer a political unit, the native Indians of the section are still known as Patagonians. Most of them owe allegiance to Chile, and a few live in Argentine territory.

Question: Why have the Chinese people been asleep to progress for so many years?

Answer: North of South America and east of Central America.

Question: Haw was the Pacific ocean discovered?

Answer: Most people, soon after Columbus discovered America, supposed Panama to be a part of Asia. Expeditions were made to find out just what this land contained. Among the explorers was a young Spaniard named Vasco Nunez de Balboa, who came with a party to the Gulf of Darien, not far east of Colon. Here he founded a settlement and traded for gold with the Indians. A young Indian chief told Balboa of a land to the south very much richer in gold than Panama. This land was over the mountains where there was a sea so great that no one had ever reached its end. On September 1, 1513, Balboa started for this goal. He cut his way through the thick forest to the top of the mountains, and then, on September 25, 1513, he saw a great sea to the south which he named the South sea, but which we now call the Pacific Ocean.

Question: What is significant about the island of San Salvador?

Answer: It is the island upon which Columbus landed when he first discovered America. It is one of the most fertile islands of the Bahamas. San Salvador is as rich today as when Columbus landed upon it.

Evidence Of Progress

The pace at which late model owners traverse rough stretches in the highway is another argument in favor of that newer model which everyone wants to buy.

Such is the comfort of modern springing that there is no necessity for slowing down when traveling over a pavement surface that once would have brought the driver down to a snail's pace.

to evade the advice of the district attorney."

Supervisor Beer demanded that District Attorney Ferrell give his opinion to the board personally. He had the support of Supervisor Poole.

Ferrell told the board that "there are two men contesting for the job of engineer. The best solution is not to name either man to the position of acting executive. The existence of a controversy creates an uncertainty, and we will avoid complications if we name a neutral county officer."

The two opposing supervisors then capitulated and voted for the resolution, making the choice unanimous.

Kellogg's letter nominating the sheriff pointed out that the veteran peace officer is "thoroughly familiar with the governmental affairs of the county," and is "eminently qualified to act." However, his choice of a substitute came as a complete surprise.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

World production of gold for the first three months of this year is set at 6,740,000 ounces by American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

This is at the rate of 26,960,000 ounces for the entire current year, valued at $943,600,000, with gold at $35 an ounce, compared with actual recovery of 27,236,000 ounces in 1934 —an indicated drop of 276,000 ounces, or $9,660,000.

South Africa is credited with 2,593,000 ounces; Russia, 1,050,000; United States, including Philippine Islands, 735,000; Canada, 710,000; Mexico, 192,000; Rhodesia, 170,000; and British West Africa, 104,000, ozs.

At the rate shown in the first quarter, Canada's production for the entire year would approximate 2,840,000 ounces, worth $99,400,000, compared with 2,964,000 ounces in 1934. However, the first quarter's recovery is usually low, owing to climatic conditions in the Ontario fields.

The British Columbia Department of Mines reminds mining men that renewal of Free Miners' certificates must be made by May 31, including all representing property held under the "Mineral Act" and the "Placer Mining Act." Fees run from $5 for individual miners to between $50 and $100 for incorporated companies.

No exemptions are provided in recent amendments to the acts, but six months' extension of time is allowed in which to revive title forfeited through lapse of a previous certificate, a privilege given only if a property holder obtains a Free Miners' license within six months after the 31 of May, upon which his ordinary certificate lapsed.

Provisional certificates must not be confused with the ordinary free miners' certificate. The former is issued free of cost under the special act and are good for the location of a placer claim and recording same without fee.

Operations are to be resumed by Robert Wilkinson, managing director of Congress Gold Mines, announces that directors have authorized active development upon the tier of five claims on the north side of Gun Creek, which are not involved in the deal recently concluded with the Sloan-Spencer interests, as soon as labor conditions in the Bridge River district have resumed normal. The operation will be known as Congress Extension.

Senator Gold Mines Ltd., owning 25 claims across Bridge River from the Congress property in the Bridge River district, H. L. Batten, M. E., managing director, and Alec. Martin, engineer, having left for the property to supervise development.

Supplies have already been delivered at the camp and the snow is rapidly disappearing. Two parallel veins have been discovered by surface work with values running from 1.3 to .32 oz. gold per ton, and the work this season will be by tunneling to gain depth upon the surface showings.

A crew will be engaged at Bridge River and work is to be started at once. Mr. Martin, who will be in direct charge, was formerly with the Columnario Gold Mines near Usk.

Bralco Limited, the parent company of Bralorne and Bradian, Bridge River district, has taken a firm option, with an approved agreement attached, on the property of Hixon Mother Lode, Ltd., consisting of some 76 claims surrounding the properties of Quesnelle Quartz Mining Co. on Hixon Creek, Cariboo district.

This area was one of the earliest worked by pioneer B. C. miners and subsequently by Ah Bau and his Chinese associates, who recovered $4,000,000 in gold from a narrow stretch about two miles long.

Various attempts have been made to discover the mother lode source of this enrichment and the entry of Bralco into the picture seems to suggest that its location on the Hixon Mother Lode ground is considered likely.

SOME HEROES AND EXPLOITS OF EARLY TIMES

Statue Of Livingston Has Honor Place In Statuary Hall In Washington

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Robert R. Livington's place in history may be estimated from the fact that his statue is one of two which represent New York in Statuary Hall, Washington, D. C. He was an American statesman and jurist. His services to his state revealed both patriotism and ability of high order.

New York City was his birthplace and he was educated at King's College (now Columbia University). Admitted to the bar in 1773, he began the pratice of law, but soon accepted an appointment as recorder, and thus began a long career of distinguished public service. As he was the first chancellor of New York, he is generally known as Chancellor Livingston. He represented the state in the Continental Congress, and the movement to set up an independent government received his cordial support. He helped to draw up the Declaration of Independence, and was a member of the New York convention which ratified the Federal Constitution. When it became necessary for New York to organize a state government as a member of the new Union, he was a member of the committee which drafted the constitution of the state.

In his capacity as chancellor he administered the oath of office to Washington on the occasion of the first inaugural. Though he refused President's Washington's offer to appoint him minister to France, in 1794, he accepted the same offer of President Jefferson, and became minister to that country in 1801. He began negotiations at once for the purchase of the Louisiana Territory, and much of the credit for this achievement belongs to him.

In 1804 Livingston returned to the United States and retired from public office. His remaining years were devoted to the development of scientific agriculture and the promotion of steam navigation. In the latter work he was associated with Robert Fulton. The first steamboat, the "Clermont," was named for Livingston's country home at Clermont, New York.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney

In the spring and early summer months a great many cities and towns throughout the United States begin their annual clean up campaigns.

This is the one time of the year when every individual and organization should co-operate with the local fire department, as it not only helps to make a better appearance of the community, but also helps to lower the fire hazards.

The purposes of this campaign for civic improvement are similar to Fire Prevention Week. It also promotes health and sanitation, accident safety, stimulates local business and creates some employment.

The majority of fires start in basements, attics, closets and other places where rubbish and unnecessary accumulations of combustible materials are allowed to pile up.

Rubbish may be the direct cause of fire by spontaneous combustion and all accumulations of combustible material favor the starting of fire by matches, cigarettes or chance sparks.

Tire Spots Explained

Those spots on the tread of the front tire do not always mean misalignment of the front wheels.

Looseness in the bearings which permits the wheel to wobble will produce the same effect. Spotty wear on the rear tires finds its most common explanation in the same maladjustment.

COMEDY PICTURE SHOWING THREE LOVE TANGLES

"Gold Diggers Of 1935" Is Declared To Be Greatest Musical Production

"Gold Diggers of 1935," First National's latest mammoth musical spectacle, opens at the Daly City Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, June 23, 24 and 25.

The story by Robert Lord and Peter Milne is a rollicking comedy with three separate love tangles. There is a play within the play, a wealthy widow producing a milk fund show at a swanky summer hotel.

Dick Powell and Gloria Stuart have the romantic leads, with Frank McHugh and Dorothy Dare in a semi-comic love affair and Glenda Farrell taking an eccentric millionaire over the jumps. Alice Brady has the role of the rich widow who is bilked of a considerable fortune by a theatrical producer, a part played by Adolphe Menjou; Joseph Cawthorn in the role of a scenic and costume artist and the hotel manager, Grant Mitchell.

Winifred Shaw, the former musical comedy stage star, sings in the show. Dick Powell also sings catchy airs which were written by the famous song team of Warren and Dubin.

In addition to the regular cast, Ramon and Rosita, dancers, and 300 beautiful girls appear in the dance numbers. The screen play is by Manuel Seff and Peter Milne.

"Mary Jane's Pa," with Guy Kibbee and Aline McMahon, is on the same program.

ESTABLISH HEALTH CLINIC AT NEW VILLA SANITARIUM

Citizens Of Daly City Will Will Soon Enjoy Best Up To Date Service

Arrangements have been completed for the establishment of a Health Clinic for Daly City in the near fture.

A number of prominent physicians and surgeons have signified their willingness to assist in this work, which no doubt will prove a great boon to the residents of Daly City and vicinity.

This clinic will be located at the Villa Sanitarium, which has recently moved to its new and modern building, where the latest equipment has been installed, and all electrical and mechanical instruments for diagnosis and treatment have been purchased, including an up to date X-ray machine.

For a long time Daly City has been in need of a clinic of this type, where patients who are ill or injured may receive treatment at a very nominal cost when they cannot afford the services of a private physician or surgeon. This clinic will be run on the same basis as clinics in larger cities, where persons may receive prompt and skillful attention and care.

The Villa Sanitarium is under the management of Mr. Joseph Sarto. The medical staff consists of Dr. V. H. Mitchell, surgeon, who also has offices in San Francisco; and Dr. W. C. Lynch, who has established his residence and office in Daly City. The consulting staff consists of the most competent men in their particular specialty to be found in the Bay City region.

It is contemplated there will be no direct charge for services at the clinic. Only a nominal fee will be asked to pay expenses of medical and surgical supplies necessary for the treatment of patients.

RESERVE OFFICERS ENJOY CARD PARTY

Those present included: Captain-Adjutant Roger Casamanjou, Captains Harold Gerdes, Howard Glover, Renteffer, George Nelson, First Lieutenant Frank Miles and Lieutenants Albert Ennor, Clyde Holliday, Henry Walters, Howard Reilly, Hug Rincon and William Johnston.

The local merchant can increase his business and keep purchases at home by advertising in The Record.

LOCKING BRAKES

When brakes suddenly lock, the driver frequently has had warning of impending trouble, which he ignored or failed to understand.

Often before brakes lock, they slip. This occurs when the locking is the direct result of lubricant getting on the linings. As the lubricant heats it becomes sticky and develops a locking action.
